IAPD Recognizes Stephanie Neugebauer, Indelco Plastics Corporation with Prestigious President's Award

OVERLAND PARK, Kans. – The International Association of Plastics Distribution (IAPD) recognized Stephanie Neugebauer, Indelco Plastics Corporation, for her outstanding contributions to the organization at the opening general session for the 58th Annual IAPD Convention and Plastics Expo on October 29 in Chicago, IL, USA.

Neugebauer became chair of the Education Committee in 2013 and in the last year has guided the committee to two new IAPD certificate programs. Her expertise in pipe, valves and fittings paved the way for the development of the Pipe, Valves and Fittings Certificate Program. She not only took the time to help review the course materials and exam questions but recruited others in the industry to provide their insights to ensure the program content is accurate and of value. Simultaneously, Neugebauer oversaw the launch of the Excellence in Sales Level II Certificate Program developed by corporate trainer Chuck Holmes.

“The President’s Award is given to an individual or company who has gone above and beyond the call of duty on behalf of the association,” said IAPD CEO Susan E. Avery, CAE. “Stephanie truly is the biggest advocate of IAPD’s educational offerings, taking every chance she gets to tell our members and the world about the benefits of being better informed about plastics. We thank Stephanie for all her service to IAPD this year.”

Neugebauer is the branch manager for Indelco Plastics Corporation in Omaha, NE, USA. She has been with the company since June 2010. Previously, she worked for a pipe manufacturing company and has spent her entire career thus far in plastics. Neugebauer attended Hastings College near Lincoln, NE, USA, where she majored in communication arts and was a member of the nationally ranked forensics (speech and debate) team.
