OVERLAND PARK, Kans. – The International Association of Plastics Distribution is pleased to announce that All-State Industries, a fabricator, has joined the association. The company is headquartered in West Des Moines, IA, USA, and has locations in Chicago, IL, Columbus, OH, Charlotte, NC, and Dallas, TX. All-State Industries joined IAPD in May 2013, along with four other companies. The five new member companies joining in May set an association record for new members in one month. The IAPD Board, Membership Committee and staff are all happy to see so many new members who appreciate the value of IAPD membership.

"I am pleased to welcome All-State Industries as a new IAPD member," said Susan E. Avery, CAE, IAPD Chief Executive Officer. "IAPD represents that plastics distribution supply chain and most importantly, champions the use of plastics in applications and the use of distribution as the way to market. Companies who are admitted to IAPD as full members of the association must evidence their commitment to the plastics distribution supply chain. The association will be their essential source for networking, training tools, education, information and insight. Through IAPD, they will have access to the thought leaders in the plastics distribution industry."
